Dale was a devoted member of the St. Lukes United Methodist Church, where he served as a lay speaker and dedicated his talents to leading worship at Bethesda Southgate for an impressive 30 years. His faith was a cornerstone of his life, and he was a tremendous supporter of both his church and various children's charities, demonstrating a heart full of love and compassion for others.

As a Mason, Dale found camaraderie and purpose, embodying the principles of brotherhood and service. He was a man of many passions, delighting in building toy models, collecting comic books, and immersing himself in the world of movies and theater. Known for his infectious laughter, he had a unique gift for bringing joy to his children and grandchildren, making sure they always had a reason to smile.

In his youth, Dale was a talented tap dancer, even gracing the stage of The Ted Mack Amateur Hour in the 1950s—an experience he fondly recalled.

Dale's most treasured role was that of a grandfather, a title he wore with pride and joy. His legacy of love and laughter will continue through his children and his cherished grandchildren.

“ So sorry to hear about Dale. I was raised by Vera McCormick nee Aubuchon. Dale and his Mom used to come visit us in New Jersey and we visited them in St Louis. I remember his home made movies especially his version of Psycho! I was so jealous of his dancing. Great guy
