“ All of us cousins had different ways of relating to each other. For Vern and I, it was fishing and our love of the outdoors. For Greg and I, it was music and fashion. But with you Denise, it was like you were the big sister I never had during that time when you lived with us in Webster. I remember our talks in the park where you bolstered my confidence at a time when my self esteem was so low. I think about those talks sometimes and feel grateful for them to this day. You obviously carried this ability to care, comfort, and support others throughout your life. To me that is a life well lived.
